

Love-Lust-Kink #13 Book 8. Breast Fetish Guide

For the husband, the wife's breasts should satisfy him at all times. Proverbs 5:19

What do bra sizes mean? A, almost B, better C, cute D, damn good E, enormous F, fake G, gone south, for older people

The desire to suck includes within it the desire for the mother's breast, which is therefore the first object of sexual desire; I cannot convey to you any adequate idea of the importance of this first object in determining every later object adopted, of the profound influence it exerts. Sigmund Freud, General Introduction to Psychoanalysis, 1920

Breasts exist to feed newborns and to signal sexuality to men. A breast is composed of fat, breast tissue and many nerve endings called ducts that lead to the nipple, which is centered in the areola. A breast does not contain muscle tissue. Breasts are fatty tissue in front of the chest muscles. Within the breast, there are glands that produce milk for the baby to drink by sucking on the nipple. The only muscles in the breast are in the nipples. The size and shape of a woman's breasts are determined mostly by their fat content. Whenever you see a skinny woman with big breasts, it's unlikely that they're natural. Within the fatty tissue, there are glands that produce milk and milk ducts that lead to the nipple where the milk is secreted. If a woman is lactating, the baby suckles the breast milk through the nipple. The shape of the nipple can be flat, protruding or inverted. Only female mammals have breasts aka mammary glands which they use to produce milk to breastfeed their babies. Males have breasts because every baby in the womb starts as a female by default and only becomes male if certain hormones are added to the mix. The areola is the circular, darkened area in the center of the surface of the breast. The nipple is the rounded, protruding structure in the center of the areola. Beneath the skin of the breasts, there is a layer of fatty tissue (adipose). Alveolar glands and the lactiferous ducts are in this tissue. The alveolar glands produce breast milk. They empty into the lactiferous ducts. These ducts store milk and open into the nipples where the baby sucks them to get milk. The color and size of the nipple and areola vary among women. The nipples contain nerves that make them an erotic zone. In the United States, there are about a quarter of a million breast augmentation cosmetic surgeries every year. The United States sexualizes the breasts such that women have to cover them in public whereas in other cultures, they don't make a big deal about breasts. Very few European women get breast implants. There are many beaches in Europe where topless sunbathing is normal. In Africa, many women walk around bare-breasted. Carolyn Latteier, author of the book Breasts: The Womens Perspective said that in many cultures, breasts aren't sexual at all.

Kinsey, a former zoology professor, reported that the human is the only animal interested in fondling the breasts for sexual pleasure. Women get aroused when their tits are fondled. Size is irrelevant to the sexual arousal of the woman and different cultures have different sexual standards of breast size. Americans like them big, Europeans like them smaller. While breast implants are a growth industry in America, it's rare anywhere else in the world. Some women like to have them sucked, others don't. Cosmetic surgery affects different women differently. Some get more sensitive breasts, others less sensitive breasts. Breast reduction surgery lowers sensitivity because it's generally more invasive than augmentation. On an anthropological show about sex, the narrator said that when monkey and baboon females go into estrus, their breasts swell thus sending off the signal to males that they're ready to conceive. In humans, the females' breasts are permanently swelled. They stay relatively the same size whether they're ovulating or not which attracts men who
