

When Sheila, at age six, injures an even smaller child, she is remanded by the courts to a state hospital. Awaiting a vacancy there, she is enrolled in Torey Haydens class of retarded and handicapped preadolescents. Over the months, Torey and others come to realize that this nearly autistic child is in fact exceptionally gifted- one with the IQ of a genius. It becomes apparent to them that placement in any sort of institutional setting would be grossly inappropriate to the childs particular case
