

In 1936, America was years away from war with Nazi Germany. But long before the first battle of World War II, a starters gun fired the first shot in our battle against the Nazis. Adolf Hitler viewed the 1936 Berlin Olympics as a chance to show the superiority of the German race over the rest of the world. He never expected that an American, let alone a black American, would dash his dreams. Jesse Owens grew up during an age when segregation laws forced him to eat at separate restaurants and stay at different hotels. But Jesse never let it slow him down while setting world records and winning a spot on the U.S. Olympic team. Once in Berlin, the triumph of Jesses will helped him run through any barrier, winning not only Olympic gold, but countless fans.

Jesse Owens: Fastest Man Alive Hardcover – December 26, 2006. Jesse Owens grew up during the time of Jim Crow laws, but segregation never slowed him down. After setting world records for track in high school and college, he won a slot on the 1936 U.S. Olympic team. The 10.3 seconds is the time it took Owens, played onscreen by Stephan James, to complete the 100-meter race at the 1936 Olympics in Berlin. (By the way: James could run the 100 in 12 seconds at the peak of his movie training.) Yes, decades later, current fastest-man-alive Usain Bolt has that time beat. Jesse Owens mother frequently told him, Put your best foot forward. So Jesse followed her advice, worked hard, and made his dreams come true as one of t.
