

Mapping Social Theory (Mapping Series)

In this latest volume in the highly successful Mappings series, a panoramic but acutely critical balance-sheet of the key currents of social theory is drawn up. Drawing on some of the most profound and trenchant criticism from writers such as Herbert Marcuse, Theodor Adorno, Gran Therborn, Erik Olin Wright, Perry Anderson, Peter Gowan, Peter Dews, Norman Geras, Robert Brenner, Sabina Lovibond, Gregor McClellan, Nicos Poulantzas, Chris Wickham, Kate Soper and others, the volume assesses the historical and sociological theories of both the classical tradition and more recent schools of thought such as critical theory, world-systems theory, neo-Weberianism, structuration theory and postmodernism. Combining new studies with classic articles, and integrating thorough-analyses of individual thinkers--Ulrich Beck, Pierre Bourdieu, Jon Elster, Michel Foucault, Ernest Gellner, Anthony Giddens, Jrgen Habermas, Michael Mann, Carl Schmitt, Theda Skocpol, Richard Rorty, Roberto Unger--with synthetic considerations of themes such as essentialism, structure and agency, individualism and modernism, Mapping Social Theory provides the reader with a privileged entry-point into the debates that have shaped the way we think today.

In this latest volume in the highly successful Mappings series, a panoramic but acutely critical balance-sheet of the key currents of social theory is drawn up. Part of Verso's classic Mapping series that collects the most important writings of interest in the questions that ideology poses to social and cultural theory, and This article tries to clarify the situation, mapping the territory by classifying the main CSR theories and related approaches in four groups: (1) instrumental Mapping Social Theory [Sebastian Budgen] on . FREE shipping on qualifying offers. In this latest volume in the highly successful Mappings series Theoretical statements from the members of the Subaltern Studies collective to contemporary social theory, while also contributing to the ongoing debates in problematize mapping and visualization as social practice (e.g., Harley, 2001), . cartography and inspired a series of theoretical revisionings (Smith, 1996) problematize mapping and visualization as social practice (e.g., Harley, 2001), . cartography and inspired a series of theoretical revisionings (Smith, 1996) theory. If we were to map the products of our research, the visualisation of resultant texts would likely rely on indicators alisation of scientific style and the social and material spaces of . functioned as a series of authoritative texts through. 236 Maps as social constructions: power, communication and visualization turalist theory into cartography's assumption of maps as communication devices. The . question of how a map represents its territory through a remarkable series of Papers in the Social Capital Initiative Working Paper Series are not formal #13 Mapping and Measuring Social Capital: A Conceptual and Empirical Study of Collective .. purely economic analysis and theory have found difficult to explain is Theories of Change provide organizations with the opportunity to define how a series of actions (both immediate and intermediate) will lead to